CSN to Host Speed Networking Event

Like speed dating for the digital age, but for employers looking to connect with qualified workers

April 10, 2019 – Many of the top local technology-focused employers will be on the College of Southern Nevada campus Wednesday, April 17, for a Speed Networking event designed to give tech-savvy students a chance to show off the skills they’ve learned in college.

Patterned after speed dating, the event gives CSN students studying business, marketing, cybersecurity, computer networking, web development, real estate and others subjects a chance to meet briefly with employers and sell themselves in five minutes or less.

“This is a great opportunity for our students to network with potential employers,” said Margaret Taylor, chair of the Computing and Information Technology Department. “These events have proven to be great successes, very popular with both students and employers.”

Some of the nearly two dozen employers scheduled to attend are Sitel, the Bureau of Reclamation, McCarran International Airport, KLA Laboratories, Ellucian and Intellimind.

Students will be expected to think fast, hand out resumes and show off what they’ve learned at CSN. Those who make the right impression could be on the path to a career in the industry.
